Everybody Can Dance!

written by Kara Navolio

illustrated by Ruth-Mary Smith

The music starts. You feel the beat.
You clap your hands and tap your feet.

Everybody can dance!

About the Author

Kara Navolio is a freelance writer who tells stories of real-life heroes and interesting people for local newspapers. She loves dancing with her husband or friends, or really any time she hears a good song! Watching other people dance always makes her smile. Kara is the mom of two grown-up kids. She lives in the beautiful San Francisco Bay area, where she works on more books for kids, hikes, paints, and spends time with her family. Visit her online at www.karanavolio.com.

About the Illustrator

Ruth-Mary Smith is an illustrator of children's picture books. Having studied fine arts at TAFE College and participated in watercolor courses over many years, Ruth-Mary enjoys creating images for children to love. Her favorite illustrations can be described as whimsical and sweet. She lives with her three daughters and husband on Sydney's Northern Beaches in Australia. She illustrates from her home studio, working primarily with her favorite medium, watercolors, as well as pastel and pencils. Ruth-Mary greatly enjoyed the opportunity to work on this special project, Everybody Can Dance!
